ment down and give us back our lives?

Oh yes, what about the parliamentary inquiry into the SMRC and waste plant? Will that continue, or will it magically disappear now that the election has been run and won?

Before the State election, former Canning councillor Chris Boots, Labor member Tony McRae, and Liberal members Mike Nahan and Joe Francis all pledged to sort out this mess if they were elected.

Will anyone actually do anything? Or was that just another hollow election promise?

'Surprise' is well after due time

WELL, well, well. What a surprise.

The Department of Environment and Conservation has declared that after a very thorough investigation, the white elephant recycling plant in Canning Vale "has serious odour problems".

It's about time. The residents in this area have been saying this for five years.

Now what will happen? Will the DEC sit on its collective hands and continue to do nothing? Will SMRC member councils bury their heads in the sand and say there is no smell, as they have in the past?

Will the SMRC spend more millions of ratepayers funds "trying" to solve a problem that it says doesn't exist?

Or, will someone finally shut this stinking experi-
